Hope UK - Equipping Young People to make Drug-Free Choices

About Hope UK

Children and young people are at the heart of Hope UK's mission.

Our vision is for children and young people in Britain to live confident, healthy, drug-free and fulfilling lives.

Our aim is to equip children and young people throughout the United Kingdom to develop the knowledge and skills they need to make drug-free choices. We do this through direct delivery of programmes to children and young people, as well as training those with responsibility for them, parents and youth workers, for example. Young people are encouraged to get involved with our work in a variety of ways, including membership of our youth branch, Generation Hope. We also develop local networks of community-based volunteers who work directly with children and young people as well as providing training for adults.

Our staff and volunteers work with children and young people in schools and youth groups, providing interactive, age-appropriate educational sessions about alcohol, nicotine and other drugs. Our experience of working with young people shows that many still do not realise how damaging regular excessive drinking or using vapes, for example, can be. Life skills that enhance peer resistance and build confidence are woven into sessions designed to encourage healthy choices and enable children and young people to realise their potential.

As demand for our services increases, we are aiming to increase the number of trained volunteers around the UK to help meet demand. Where we have local funding, we employ a part time worker to support and develop our work in their area.

Our History

History of Hope UK

(Formerly the United Kingdom Band of Hope Union)

One of the first responses to the problems of excessive drinking in the 1800's was the formation of temperance societies. These usually had a Christian base and were initially composed of people who took a pledge to abstain from spirits and be moderate in their consumption of other alcoholic drinks. However, problems caused by excessive consumption of alcohol in society at that time were considerable and there was controversy as to whether moderate drinking of any alcoholic beverage was sufficient to tackle the problem. In 1832 the 'Seven Men of Preston' signed a pledge to totally abstain from intoxicating beverages. This was known as 'signing the pledge' The idea spread, and temperance societies sprang up all over Britain.

In August 1847 Ann Jane Carlisle was invited by Leeds Temperance Society to speak. Mrs Carlisle was an Irish lady concerned about excessive drinking amongst children and the effect that adult drinking was having on them. During her time in Leeds several children and young people showed an interest in her talks and 'signed the pledge'. It was suggested that a special temperance group to be set up for children under 16. Its aims would be to teach children about Christianity and the problems associated with drinking and to encourage them to live a healthy, alcohol-free lifestyle. In November 1847 the first meeting of this group took place in Leeds. About 300 children attended, 200 of whom 'signed the pledge' for the first time, the rest having already done so. The group became known as the 'Band of Hope'.

Other groups were starting the same kind of children's clubs and many of them took the name 'Band of Hope', together becoming the Band of Hope movement. In 1855 the UK Band of Hope Union. The Band of Hope movement embraced all sorts of activities - it produced a children's hymn book, wrote children's songs, ran and started more children's clubs (the essence of the work), held bazaars, produced booklets, leaflets, magic lantern slide shows etc., sent qualified medical men to give lectures in schools, held competitions and festivals and crowned pageant queens every year. In 1897, the Jubilee year, the estimated membership was nearly 3.5 million, Queen Victoria was patron, and several celebrations were held.

In some ways, it could be said that the success of the Band of Hope caused its own decline. As alcohol misuse became less of a problem and as legislation improved there seemed to be less need to work so fervently in this area and like many of the other social reform charities formed in Victorian times, the Band of Hope began to decline.

Recently, the United Kingdom Band of Hope Union has changed and adapted, becoming Hope UK in 1995. With the increased use of recreational drugs, Hope UK now specialises in drug education and life skills training.

About this Appointment

Hope UK has seen significant development over the past few years and is seeking to continue this work, by growing sustainable funding, improving our public profile – especially to churches – and most importantly by increasing the number of activities we do each year.

We have recently been gifted the opportunity to continue work in South Wales through becoming trustee of the Phillips Memorial Charity and are aiming to continue the long-term work of this charity and Newport Temperance Society. We are looking for a local person to work part time to help develop this vital work in South Wales.

Job Description Project Worker (South Wales)

Accountable to:	CEO
Based at:	Home based, with travel to events in South Wales, and occasional travel to staff events – in London or Kettering.
Hours of work:	Flexible, average 7 hours per week
Salary:	£13.00 per hour
Annual Leave:	Paid holiday will be calculated at the end of each year of employment pro rata (i.e. according to hours worked) to the holiday entitlement of full-time staff and the appropriate amount of paid leave allocated

Summary of Duties

Project Workers are the local or regional face of Hope UK. As such, the job can be very varied. The description below is to give a guideline of the kind of things a project worker might do. It can be viewed as a process, rather than a day-to-day list! The primary responsibility of this post will be to further the work of Hope UK in South Wales – Newport in particular - through developing (recruiting, training and motivating) the volunteer base in South Wales, getting support from local churches, and promoting our work to relevant organisations.

South Wales is a large area, and we would expect the project worker to focus on smaller areas – ideally starting with Newport. We have had a small volunteer team in South Wales for some time, but this will be the first time we begin to develop work in Newport.

The role of the South Wales Project Worker will include:

1. Recruiting & supporting volunteers in South Wales
2. Helping to train volunteers in South Wales
3. Setting up and supporting regional/local groups of volunteers and others involved in the work of Hope UK South Wales
4. Helping develop opportunities for volunteers in South Wales
5. Helping develop financial and prayer support for the work of Hope UK South Wales, visiting churches and Christian organisations to represent Hope UK and take part in worship services as appropriate.

6. Training as a Hope UK Drug Educator and provide relevant Hope UK sessions to groups in South Wales, including Christian teaching for churches and Christian organisations.
 7. Assisting with the Hope UK conference
 8. Processing and delivering local bookings (liaising with the administrators)
 9. General Administration and record keeping

Hope UK is a drug education and prevention charity with a Christian foundation working for children and young people. This includes the promotion of alcohol and drug-free options. Our staff and voluntary Drug Educators are therefore Christians who have chosen lifestyles free from the use of alcohol and recreational drugs. Our CEO, Sarah Brighton, is happy to talk this through with any prospective applicant.

The duties of this post will include representing the Christian ethos of the organisation. Because of this, there is a Genuine Occupational Requirement (under the terms of the relevant employment regulations) that the post-holder be a Christian.
